On a national basis, recidivism estimates range from 60% and higher. This means that 6 out of 10 of those released from prison will return to prison within 3 years. Obviously, the system by itself is not working.

A faith-based dorm is a voluntary program of instruction in a prison that is designed to effect the inner-transformation of offenders. Recidivism rates among those completing a faith-based dorm program are less than ten percent (10%).

Hope Prison Ministries is developing a curriculum entitled ReGen for use in the faith-based dorms of prisons, starting in Texas. The curriculum will emphasize academic and spiritual education, mentoring and accountability before and after an offender's release. Which model would you rather support?

The Texas Department of Criminal Justice's Model:

- In 2010, Texas prisons cost $2,478,788,590
- More than 500,000 Texans are under some form of supervision from the TDCJ
- The Average Cost of Housing an Offender is $16,000/year+

The HPM Model:

- Launch the ReGen curriculum in 12 Texas prisons, serving 3,000+ offenders (www.FaithBasedDorms.com)
- Save Texas Taxpayers $37,000,000
- The Average Cost of the Program per Offender: $2,700

I choose the Hope Prison Ministries model. I will support HPM with: $_____ Monthly $_____ Quarterly $_____ Annually $_____ One-Time
